

DOUBLE-VOTE-DAY PRESENTS OPPORTUNITY FOR CANDIDATES TO BETTER POSITIONS IN STANDING AMONG CONTESTANTS

All of the Leaders Increase Their Total Vote, But Positions in Standing Remain Unchanged — Miss Muffett
Adds 11,100 Votes to Her Total

Double-vote-day is near an end, but there are still several hours more in which candidates in the Merchants-Courier Yellowstone National Park Tour Contest may avail themselves of the opportunity to get double votes with every purchase made. The double-vote-day will end with the closing hour of the stores tonight.

Many of the candidates and their friends availed themselves of the opportunity to get double the number of votes for their purchases. These double votes will count considerably in the total votes the candidates receive.

In the tabulation today additional changes are recorded in the vote totals of each of the contestants, but their positions in the standing remain unchanged.

Miss Sara Milnor still retains her leadership and increased her total votes by 1,900. Miss Mary McAuley continues to stand second and gained 4,600 votes, while Miss Janice M. Muffett bettered her position by 11,000 votes, which brings her total vote to 84,000 and keeps her in third place.

WATER SURROUNDS SOME HOMES IN YARDLEY AREA

River Road at Morrisville
Closed, and Traffic is Detoured

CRAFT DRIFTS DOWN

With one home at Yardley surrounded by water from the swollen Delaware, and with many sections of that borough flooded, residents of the section are much inconvenienced. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Strock, who reside on the River Road, above Yardley, now find themselves cut off from their neighbors, and from highways in general. Many bungalows along the roadway have water reaching up to the first floor.

At Borden's lock the River Road was flooded for some distance. Maple and Fuld avenues, Yardley, were covered with water, and J. L. Eggleston, a milk dealer there, served his customers in the flooded area by means of a rowboat. Nelson Dilliplane used a long flatboat to deliver ice to his customers.

The River Road at Morrisville was closed yesterday afternoon and signs were placed to detour traffic. The River Road on the Jersey shore near Villa Victoria was under water for a few hours. The river rose to a height of 20 feet at Phillipsburg, while the rise at Lambertville was 12 feet above normal. Last night it had dropped nearly three feet at the latter place. No damage resulted there, although a number of cellars along Lambert street contained several feet of water. The Union Paper Manufacturing Company, at New Hope, and the Riegley Paper Corporation at Milford, were compelled to close down temporarily because of the high water. Firemen at Milford pumped water from the plant at that place.

A number of rowboats, canoes, heavy logs and trees came down the swirling stream from the upper sections. Employees of the sand dredging boat in the river near the Marine Terminal, Trenton, managed to save a number of small craft torn loose from their moorings.

Decision On Yardley Street Case Withheld By Court

YARDLEY, July 11—The regular monthly meeting of Yardley Borough Council found final decision on the Main street case still withheld by the court. The special meeting held Monday evening, to further discuss the remedy for the main thoroughfare, resulted in the awaiting of the decision of the judges, which is expected this month.

The zoning committee reported the addition of three citizens, Robert C. Belville, 2nd, A. J. Cadwallader and Martin A. Hayes.

Railroad officials state that no one was injured. Passengers were transferred by bus between the Clinton Street station and New Brunswick, while trains were routed over the Amboy Division.

OUTSTANDING SCOUTS

Scouts and Leaders Recognized for Their Excellent Activities

Camp Buccou is packed this week with seven Boy Scout troops. Although the enlarging of the Doylestown Kiwanis Crafts Lodge is not completed, it was necessary to make temporary arrangements to make it possible for South Langhorne, under Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Harry McGrath, to occupy it on Sunday. The waterfront opened this week with Chalfont led by Scoutmaster Gilbert W. Carlin. Other camps are occupied by Edgely, Scout Camp, Leonard Allman; Cornwells, Camp Lookout, neighborhood commissioner William Amick; Perkaskie No. 2, Forest View, Lester Vold; Newtown No. 2, Mountain View, Scoutmaster John Bone; and Morrisville No. 1, Stockade, assistant scoutmaster Burtis C. Tomlinson.

Fourth of July was a quiet day at Buccou. Everyone observed Scout Executive William F. Livermore's request that there would not be any shooting of fireworks. All of the troops conducted individual campfires. Many friends of the Scouts came with picnic suppers, and in several of the camps the mothers helped their sons carry out their detail assignments of dish washing or vegetable preparation. John Harkness, Sellersville, and Robert Turner, Siles, tied for the first week Buccou Camp outstanding scout. The two Scouts were the selection of the leaders, and it was impossible to select either of them as having displayed better camping spirit than the other. Both of them were exceptional in their camp and troop service, helpfulness to other Scouts, and all-round camp fellowship.

Robert Bair, New Hope; Elwood Hoffman, New Britain; William Getz, Siles; and Thomas Harkness, Arthur Strang, and Roy Wilkinson, Sellersville, were the honor scouts. For having a record for the week of unselfish service to their fellow campers, devotion to Buccou, and having been outstanding in living up to their Scout Oath and Law, they were initiated into the Order of the Arrow, the National Honor Camp Brotherhood. A degree team of the Ajapeu Lodge of the Bucks County Scouting Council participated.

BRITAIN IS DOUBLING SIZE OF AIR FORCE TO PROTECT LONDON

Ready to Stretch Gigantic Fish Nets Across Skies to Catch and Hold Invaders

An International News Service staff correspondent continues from London the account begun from Paris and of the preparations for aerial war horrors. This is the seventh of a series of dispatches from European capitals detailing the dramatic story of the mobilization of whole populations for the coming struggle.

By HOWARD BERRY
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935, International News Service)

LONDON, July 11.—(INS)—The aerial arm of the British Home Defense Command, at present composed of 43 Royal Air Force squadrons, will be strengthened by 32 new squadrons by the spring of 1939.

Of this number 11 new squadrons will be added to the Home Defense Command by the end of 1935. The R. A. F. squadrons of the Home Defense Command are composed of two squadrons of bombing machines to one squadron of fighting machines, and the additional squadrons to be added will be similarly proportioned.

While the British Government's defense plans do not satisfy some of the experts and critics, who personally would turn all fighter squadrons into bomber squadrons; do away with anti-aircraft artillery, and abolish the civilian Observer Corps, the British Air Ministry is of the opinion that by concerted methods of defense, consisting of artillery directed with something very near precision, of fighters of speed performance at low and at high altitudes, of balloon "aprons" and also of Observer Corps, there is a very good prospect of inflicting heavy casualties on an attacking enemy air fleet and preventing it from bombing the principal cities.

The British Home fleet has also carried out extensive maneuvers repelling aerial invaders in the last 12 months, and the British Admiralty will continue these manoeuvres.

While the recommendations of the Anti-Gas Sub-Committee of the Imperial Defense Committee do not provide for specially built gas shelters, gas training, or gas masks for the formed the ceremony. Sakima O. Kenneth Fretz, Quakertown; William Carlin, Chalfont; Walter Carwithen, Doylestown, and J. Kenneth Mininger, Sellersville, conducted the ritual. The lodge members had Saturday supper together, and participated in the ceremonial campfire. Scouts Lawrence McCoy as the Indian dancer, and Leonard Dyer, of Bristol, playing the tom-tom added to the inspiration. Continued on Page Three

LEATHER PLANT HERE TO EMPLOY MORE MEN

Lucius Beebe & Sons to Operate
New Department Beginning Next Week

INCREASE FLOOR SPACE

With a program of plant expansion practically complete, Lucius Beebe & Sons, Incorporated, will at the beginning of next week commence operation of their new department which has been equipped for making all types of upper leathers.

In years past the Beebe corporation has finished and tanned only patent leathers, the tannery being added to the plant in 1927. The expansion and addition of the new department is made possible by utilization of from 35,000 to 40,000 square feet of floor space that has not been used for a number of years.

It is stated by plant manager, Lawrence E. Machette, that approximately 50 additional employees will be required when the new department is in full operation. This will considerably increase the present number of employees which totals 136. Although the new department is not quite half as large as the present plant, with the "soaking" of hides approximately 50% at first, it is announced that in a reasonable length of time it may be considerably larger than the original.

The buildings, two in number, which are being utilized, were used years ago by the Beebe company. "The space used was considerably larger when women were wearing patent leather shoes," stated Mr. Machette yesterday. With the new type of machinery installed within the past six weeks it will be possible to tan and finish sport elk, whites, anodes, and all shades of leathers. The two buildings are of brick construction, with floors of concrete. One is a two-story structure, and the second has one floor, each building measuring 200x60 feet. Although the tannery machinery has been installed by a firm from out-of-town, local contractors did much of the other work necessary in the renovation.

Work next week will be started on a small scale with approximately 25 per cent. of the capacity of the new department at first, with full quota of employees being gained within a few months. The new department, which will be entirely separate from the patent leather section, will be in charge of Messrs. Warren and Leslie Cox, new associates, who came to Bristol from Massachusetts. The entire plant will be under the same management as heretofore.

The Beebe corporation will continue to tan and finish leathers for the numerous large concerns that it has co-operated with in the past.

Italy Must Go On, He Says

Rome, Italy, July 11.—Ignoring as futile latest moves to renew League of Nations "mediation" in the Abyssinian dispute, Italy today cited two more incidents as justification for her campaign in the African empire. At the same time, Premier Mussolini told 150 of his veteran colonial and World War officers that Italy must go on in her determination to find an outlet for her surplus population. A communique issued by Il Duce stated that the Italian Consul-General in the Abyssinian Province of Harrar, while motoring through the town of Dere Darra had been insulted by a group of Ethiopian soldiers. Dere Darra was also the scene of the second affair when a colonial soldier at the Italian Consulate was caned and stoned.

Flood Spends Fury

Philadelphia, July 11.—The most disastrous flood in central and eastern Pennsylvania since the turn of the century today had spent its fury, leaving in its wake 13 drowned, inestimable property damage and fear of possible additional deaths from contaminated water. Despite heavy rain-falls in several sections last night and early today, rivermen reported the flood situation definitely under control with all rivers and their tributaries rapidly receding. Officials said property destruction would mount into the millions. At daybreak the Pennsylvania, Reading and Baltimore and Ohio railroads reported service operating on schedule. Practically all highways were open to motor traffic. The State Department of Health warned all persons in the flood area to boil drinking water as many sources of supply were found contaminated. Flood relief work was ordered by Governor George H. Earle.

The Delaware river on a rampage in a belated start, receded to normal after rising 23 feet. The Schuylkill, Lehigh and Susquehanna rivers also were back within their banks.

At Reading, however, a new source of alarm developed when a large leak threatened to undermine the eastern embankment of the huge Ontelaunee reservoir.

WARN BATHERS NOT TO BATHE IN THE RIVER

Flood Waters Wash Filth
From Lowlands Down
Into the stream

DANGER OF TYPHOID

Flood waters from the Lehigh coal regions reached here yesterday and the Delaware river is a thick and inky black stream. Yesterday the river here at Bristol was about three feet above normal with a stiff running current. There were considerable debris such as tree limbs, roots, timber and some boats washed down the stream, as far as Bristol. Today all danger of floods here have passed.

Despite the fact that the water is coal black and contaminated with dirt and filth washed from the lowlands of the up-state areas, bathers here continued to bathe, swim and sport about in the filthy stream.

Bathers diving overboard could not but help take in some of the water and in the opinion of many, those who are bathing in the river during the time that the freshest water is running are endangering their health and running the risk of contracting disease.

The Board of Health today urged the bathers to cease bathing in the river until such time as the stream clears-up and becomes normal.

At the water works here it was said that the water is very dirty and that every effort is being made to not only deliver clear water, but water which is free from germs and bacteria to the householder.

Last night at high tide the water reached over the Mill street wharf but then at 10.30 it began to drop.

A diving platform was washed loose from its moorings at Burlington Island Park and grounded on the point of the island.

DR. FLOOD RESIGNS CHAIRMANSHIP OF COUNTY COMMITTEE

Withdraws From the Political Arena; Calls Meeting To Name Successor

SESSION ON MONDAY

Such Action Expected For Some Time; Democratic Party Splits Grew Wider

Dr. John A. Flood, stormy-petrel of the Bucks County Democratic party, has withdrawn from the political arena, and today announced that he was tendering his resignation as county committee chairman.

"I am resigning as chairman of the Democratic County Committee, and you can give me a head-line on that today if you will," said Dr. Flood, New Hope and Trenton dentist, to a reporter over the telephone this morning, speaking from his home in New Hope.

At the same time Dr. Flood issued a call for a special meeting of the Democratic County Committee, for the purpose of electing his successor. The meeting will be held at the Fountain House, Doylestown, Monday night at eight o'clock. Dr. Flood made it plain that this meeting would be lawful and legal, and not like the one he called in New Hope recently.

Ever since Dr. Flood took hold of the reins as county chairman, he has been the center of much controversy and agitation within the ranks of the Democrats of Bucks County. The party became split into several factions, and each day the split was growing wider. It had been rumored on numerous occasions, and particularly before each county meeting that Flood was going to resign, but definite action was not taken by the Trenton dentist, until this morning when he issued the statement.

Dr. Flood despite his short career in Democratic politics, grabbed a political plum for himself early in the campaign when he was named superintendent. Continued on Page Four

Expect Navy Yard Divers To Search For Boy's Body

Divers from the Navy Yard in Philadelphia are expected at Croydon today to make a thorough search of the Delaware River in that vicinity for the body of Phillip J. Marlin 3rd, 12, who was drowned Tuesday afternoon.

This announcement was made today by Phillip Marlin, Emilie avenue, Croydon, who is the grandfather of the drowned lad.

According to Marlin they will bring diving equipment with them and for this equipment the truck of Bristol Township was sent to Philadelphia this morning.

Crews of men were still grappling for the body this morning and they kept at their work all day yesterday and well into the night.

It is believed that perhaps the body has been washed into one of the numerous pipes, said to be on the river's bed in that area and which were left there since the time when the low lands were filled in with sand blown from the channel.

The drowned lad's father and his grandfather and other relatives have been at the scene almost continuously since the drowning occurred. The father is a pitiful figure as he paces back and forth over the sand, watching every move being made to bring the surface his son's body.

The youngster had been a guest of his grandparent since July 4th, coming from his Philadelphia home, to spend a few days in the country. He went to the beach with friends and was bathing, when in attempting to float on an improvised raft of leaves, he went to his death.

Thirty Killed in 'Quake

Tokyo, July 11.—Thirty persons were killed today in a severe earthquake that rocked the district 100 miles southwest of Tokyo. Many fragile buildings collapsed and several fires broke out threatening to spread heavy destruction. Communication between the stricken city and the capital was interrupted. Authorities feared the death list would mount.

G-MEN

An attack on the so-called G-men, the organization headed by J. Edgar Hoover which has been ferreting out and apprehending public enemies, by Judge Robert Cowle, of La Crosse, Wis., leaves us wondering. To resort to this organization, said Judge Cowle, "is to confess failure and admit the futility of legal constructiveness within the constitution." At the same time he showed his realization of the inefficiency of strict routine methods by declaring that organized crime "has at its command the high-priced, able and wholly unprincipled legal mouthpiece to combat the usually young, underpaid and inexperienced, district attorney."

So what? Should we wait until public opinion forces the employment of old, experienced and better paid district attorneys? Or should we fight organized crime with improvised, but effective, weapons? Shall we ask bar associations to clean up their membership? The difficulties are enormous and even invincible. True, a lawyer was recently convicted of taking loot money from a criminal he defended; but thousands have done the same and have not been apprehended.

Of course it is more comfortable to fight major crimes by the processes beloved by judges who reverence them. It would be nice if all men were good, and all lawyers were scrupulously honest, and had nothing to do but draw up wills and plead cases in courts of equity. But we have to face facts, and when crime gets out of hand, fight it even to the death, if necessary.

The time may come when we can abolish the G-men. Right now they are doing a good work, and a work that seems to be required.

HUMOR

The sense of humor has been called a saving grace. Some have even considered it necessary to salvation. It is certain that possession of it by the proper persons would have spared the world many catastrophes.

Even the Bible makes room for humor. Hear much-afflicted Job making sport of his three comforters: "No doubt but ye are the people and wisdom shall die with you." In the fascinating story of the Magi the sacred writer tells us that these men from out of the East made a laughing stock of old Herod. They "mocked" him, and made him make a fool of himself.

Of another Herod, who, like his predecessor, thought he could outwit Heaven's decrees, a fine touch of humor is recorded. When the Pharisees told Jesus that Herod was going to get him, He boldly answered: "Go ye and tell that fox."

Many a trying situation in life might be tided over if people would only use a little humor as lubricant. They are too everlastingly serious over trifles that could be, and ought to be, laughed off.

Of too many it is truthfully to be said: "A man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel; he drinks no wine." It should be necessary to make people sad and melancholy, rather than to make them merry.

There are no horns on the motor vehicles of Utopia. That button on the steering wheel operates a set of powerful brakes.

SYNOPSIS

As Dick Bannister, young explorer, emerges from the exclusive Park Avenue residence hotel of his brother, Hod, the body of a man, followed by a snow leopard robe. The man, obviously a servant, had fallen about twenty stories. Shortly after, Dick notices a beautiful girl, standing in the doorway, order her how to bring the robe to her. Dick's aide, "Bully," fights with the girl for possession of it. When the girl finally retrieves it—pieces—she hastily runs her fingers over it and exclaims: "The clasp and girdle—gone!" Dick promises to make restitution for the torn leopard skin but the girl says, "That is impossible. The fur is not easily replaced, if at all; much less the clasp and girdle." The hotel manager approaches and begs the girl not to "feel the accident too deeply." The dead man had only been employed the previous day. Never before had Dick been so attracted to any girl. After she goes, it dawns on him that he does not even know her name and he is scheduled to leave town on a long journey that night.

CHAPTER II

Bannister got to his feet. He was moving toward the door when Hod's butler opened it noiselessly from within, revealing a tall blue figure on the threshold. It was the policeman who had taken Bannister's name as a witness to the death of the Filipino boy.

"You'll have to come up to the Sire apartment," Mr. Bannister said the man, speaking with quiet authority. "Captain Boyle says that the little Filipino was murdered and thrown out of the window."

"Murdered, eh?" Bannister felt a thrill. Here he was to be dragged by an arm of the law to the very place he had expected to enter with apologies. He stepped into the elevator with his blue coated escort.

"Accident," was my report," said the policeman, "but the medical examiner found a little round hole in the kid's back. That's what brought the Homicide Squad here."

They stepped off at the twentieth floor. "It's a duplex apartment," the man explained. "The Sires occupy two floors—the poor kid took his dive from the upper level."

"Anyone with him at the time?"

"Only Miss Sire, as far as we know."

"Miss Karen Sire—the girl who made the fuss over that fur down in the courtyard. I saw her talking to you."

Karen Sire! Bannister had learned her name; it fell muscally enough even from the policeman's lips but—

She was believed to have been alone on the floor with the Filipino when he was stabbed and thrown from the window. A cold suspicion of murder enveloped her—the man's tone, his manner, his professional leer, left no doubt of that.

Revolted as was Bannister's interest in Big Business, the name of Maurice Sire held a certain magic for him. Not because Sire was a multi-millionaire (Bannister was scornful of the breed) but because of the crashing quality of the man's achievements. Sire had been dubbed a Cecil Rhodes, a Ghengis Kahn, a Napoleon of finance.

And Karen Sire was this man's daughter—an orchid flowering upon an oak! Yet Bannister had felt conscious of a subtle strength hidden within her exotic beauty. In that strange first meeting she had impressed him like some rich, delicate bit of fabric in a boudoir, cunningly hung in place to conceal the cold steel door of a wall safe, behind which lay a wealth of precious things.

But murder! Like an imp it had tumbled into the scene. The policeman's revelation that the servant had been stabbed and hurled from a twentieth story window, followed swiftly by the statement that Karen Sire was the only other person known to have been on the upper level of the apartment at the time, had thrown Dick's bright new world into chaos. In a vague way Bannister had heard of Sire as an occasional market raider, as a plotter of revolutions, as a White House guest, as a hospital builder and as a giver of great gifts to science. This murder, he concluded, could hardly be associated with any of the great Sire doings. It looked more like a killing done by a common hotel thief, trapped in his operations.

But the policeman was waiting. Together they moved to the elevator and ascended. Tall, bronze and sturdy as his escort, Bannister stepped into the Sire apartment, fumbling at the pieces of leopard skin to which he had clung in the ascent. The policeman led the way through an expansive foyer; as they moved upstairs the vistas every-upon a table. "Miss Sire got into the fight over that robe," he explained. "I had assumed that the boy was shaking it out a window when he fell."

"He was stabbed and thrown out," Boyle answered rapidly. He looked toward Miss Sire and then at Bannister. "You know each other?"

"We met informally at the dog fight," the question had been directed to Bannister but it was Miss Sire who answered. Flippant, he thought, with the shadow of a murther charge hanging over her.

The detective glanced at the girl with a frown and again addressed Bannister. "Miss Sire has admitted that she was the only other person on this floor when the boy went out of the window. In her talk with you where presented luxurious settings. It was one of those town homes of recent development which have so rapidly decimated the stately individual mansions of New York.

"We find," the detective continued, "that the Filipino boy was stabbed in the back."

"Here you are," said the policeman, pausing at the open door of a large room and stepping back into the shadows.

There was nothing dramatic in the grouping within—nothing to suggest the presence of tragedy. A heavy-set, commonplace man with a derby tilted back on his head was seated at a telephone; another, hatless, gray, alert and smoothly groomed, stood near an ornate aquarium, conversing quietly with Miss Sire. The window through which the servant had gone to his death was still open, its heavy drapery flapping a requiem.

The smooth gray man turned to the newcomer. "Mr. Bannister? I am the detective in charge—Captain Boyle."

Bannister nodded, sending a reassuring smile toward the girl. She did not smile in return.

"We find," the detective continued, "that the Filipino boy, whose body has just been examined, was stabbed in the back before he left this room—that way." He pointed to the open window.

Bannister nodded again, omitting the smile.

"The body, I am told, fell almost at your feet in the courtyard."

"Yes."

"Did you see anything of a knife—a stiletto or dirk?"

"No."

"Sure of that?"

"Quite sure."

"Sit down, please."

Bannister dropped into a chair and threw the sacred bits of fur in the courtyard did she say anything about that?"

"You were told that I saw no one else on this floor at the time." Again it was Miss Sire, not Bannister, who answered.

"I accept your amended statement," said Captain Boyle coolly, "but suppose you let the gentleman speak for himself?"

Bannister decided to say nothing about the missing clasp and girdle which seemed to agitate the girl so deeply. "She did not discuss the accident with me," he replied.

"I told you 'he was murdered,'" snapped Boyle. "Why do you refer to it as an accident?"

Bannister stiffened. He did not digest bullying with grace. Something in the glint of his eyes as they met those of his inquisitor, and wandered toward the open window, suggested another tragic exit.

Boyle met the implied threat with a snarl, cut short by the man with the tilted derby—obviously another detective—who had swung around from the telephone.

"Mr. Sire is flying up from Washington," he announced. "Reaches Roosevelt Field in about two hours." He glanced at the girl with a look of pity, going on reluctantly: "Mr. Sire was surprised to hear that his daughter was here at the time of the murder—thought she was up in Poughkeepsie at school."

Boyle wheeled suddenly upon the girl. "How about that?" he demanded. "You've come gallivanting down to New York without letting your father know. Who was with you?" His glowering eyes shifted between her and Bannister.

Britain Doubling Size of Air Force

be used mainly as casualty dressing stations and will not be available for the general populace.

Instead of hurrying to the concentrated shelters, the general civilian population will be expected to remain in their homes. The public will also be issued with a list of instructions of how to act in the event of air raids and gas attacks. This list, phrased in simple language, is to hang in every home, and will probably place on parents the onus of instructing their families.

Another measure of protection for the civil population the British Government will take at the outbreak of the next war in which Great Britain is engaged, will be to secure an agreement among the combatants not to use poison gas.

While the use of gas in war is prohibited by the Geneva Gas Protocol of 1925, not all the principal powers have subscribed to this convention, so the British Government will, in the event of war, undertake to get assurance from countries which have not ratified the Convention that they will not use gas.

Recognizing, however, that "international conventions cannot of themselves ensure immunity against the use of gas by an enemy," the Army Council is seeking to it that British troops will know how to protect themselves against gas when they encounter it.

No portion, it is declared, "of the theater of war, homeland, or base of operations when this is overseas, within the radius of hostile aircraft, can be regarded as immune from gas attacks."

"Such attacks may begin at the moment of the declaration of war. Military units and personnel not merely brought into contact with the enemy, as well as civilians, may be called to face a gas attack. Precautions must never be relaxed, either by day or night."

These instructions, which form part of the Army Council's "Tactical Notes of Defense Against Gas," are to assist commanders in training formations and units in defensive measures, pending publication of new editions of Field Service Regulations and a special Army manual on gas defense.

While the R. A. F., the Army and Navy, is being made gas-minded and specially trained to repulse enemy air raiders, British chemists are making elaborate plans for protecting the civilian population from gas attacks.

Despite the Geneva Gas Protocol and the British Government's plans and preparations, defense against gas warfare is urgent and important, according to J. Davidson Pratt, general manager of the Association of British Chemical Manufacturers, who was a member of the technical committee at the Geneva Disarmament Conference.

He and his associates contend that gas masks alone will not protect the population against contamination of the body or clothing from gas.

They believe that the safest thing for civilians to do is to keep indoors as soon as an air-raid warning has been sounded, as airplanes will be able to spray gas without warning. To make the indoor protection as safe as possible, Pratt recommends that there should be a gas-proof room in every house, office or building in which occupants could remain until the all-clear signal was given after a gas attack.

Provisions should also be made, the chemists state, for gas-proof shelters for people caught in the streets. The building of underground shelters, proof against high explosive bombs as well as gas, is not believed to be feasible because of the expense involved, but it is thought that the problem may be solved by the construction in peace-time of underground garages which could be quickly converted into bomb shelters.

When war breaks out, persons engaged in essential services and who must remain in the open, will be furnished with oil-skin clothing in addition to gas masks so that they will be protected against airplanes spraying and splashes of liquid gas. For the protection of the population in general, chemists are discussing the possibility of the manufacture of inexpensive gas masks on a large scale, which would be placed on sale in peacetime, and be ready by the million at the outbreak of war.

Gas masks in small quantities have been on sale in Britain for some time, but they cost $15 each, and there has been no rush to buy them.

At the village of Ashford, Middlesex, an enterprising real estate development promoter has built a bomb-proof, gas attack shelter capable of housing 250 persons, as an inducement to potential home-buyers.

The British Government has been carrying on conversations with Dominion Premiers in London concerning air defense for the whole empire.

An enormous improvement has been registered lately in British anti-aircraft guns. During the war they were reputed to have registered only one direct hit in every quarter million. Now their sighting gear can be so improved that gunners can sight and fire in a fifth of the time they needed 10 years ago.

The searchlight equipment has also been perfected. It makes it impossible for an aircraft to escape once it has been picked out by the beam, officers declare.

The sound location system, which picks up the faint drone of an airplane miles away, now gives the ground stations accurate information of the direction, speed and angle of an invading force.

Another old defense system that has been brought up to date is the balloon apron. Lines of steel cables are suspended from balloons. Stretching down for hundreds of feet they may mean disaster to an aircraft colliding with them.

Rapid adjustment of the height at which these invisible aprons can be flown make them a deadly defensive weapon; the latest development has been to enable to reach hitherto unattainable heights.

This series will be continued tomorrow, when the most marvelous of all British developments in anti-aircraft defense will be described.

Camp Buccou Packed This Week With 7 Troops

Scout Leaders were recognized during the Saturday evening activity. Buccou Staff neckerchiefs of buff and brown were given to Chairman Andrew Michie, New Britain; Scoutmaster William Lyndall, Bristol; assistant scoutmaster Robert Higgins, New Hope; assistant Scoutmaster Howard Holbert, Hartsville; assistant Scoutmaster Sydney Smyth, Siles; and Junior assistant scoutmaster John Harkness, Sellersville. Staff service for more than one year received special mention, and the group included assistant Scoutmaster J. Kenneth Minninger.

Sellersville (2 years); assistant Scoutmaster William Palmer, Langhorne (2 years); junior assistant Scoutmaster William Hagar, Langhorne (2 years); and assistant Scoutmaster William Carlin, Chalfont, (five years).

Assistant Scoutmaster Howard Holbert led his Hartsville troop to first place victory in the finals of the personal inspection and exhibition drill on Saturday afternoon. Every Scout was carefully checked on the cleanliness of his clothing, hands, face and proper insignia. The drill involved the leading of the troop unit for a ten minute period. Siles came through with second place, and New Hope took third. The victory watermelon was enjoyed by Hartsville.

The weekly tournaments at Buccou give the Scouts an opportunity to test their teamwork. Leaders have an opportunity to improve their leadership ability through guiding boys during the events. Watermelons are awarded as trophies for the first place winners. "Melons" were given to Sellersville for volley ball, Hartsville for soft ball, New Hope for quoits, and touch football required a melon to be split for Sellersville and Siles.

The first Chapel was held on Sunday morning with Scoutmaster William Lyndall of Bristol giving the lesson. Scripture was read by assistant Scoutmaster Howard Holbert, prayer was given by assistant Scoutmaster J. Kenneth Minninger, of Sellersville, and hymns were led by Assistant Scoutmaster Sydney Smyth of Siles. All Catholic Scouts were taken to mass at Flemington by Scout Executive William P. Livermore, and assistant Scoutmaster J. Kenneth Minninger.

Andrew Michie made many improvements to the Mountain View site. He constructed several doorways, rearranged the cot housing, and rebuilt one of the partitions. Herbert Pettit, Sr., was at Camp Lookout with his devoted helpers who have been doing so much to develop it into an ideal site. Assisting Mr. Pettit were John Johnson, David Neill, Chester Nichols, George Mountney, and George Itterly, principal of the Tullytown Schools.

Scouts at Buccou were: Morrisville No. 1—Frank Fowler, Richard Burns, Samuel Snipes, Bradshaw Snipes, Robert Gorski, Robert Anderson, Lawrence Newell, Richard Griffiths, Marvin Gandelman, Russell Palmer, Edwin Johnson, Joseph Marks, Walter

Dr. Flood Resigns As Chairman, Co. Committee

tendent of Washington Crossing Park at a salary of $3,000.
Following his appointment Dr. Flood created a number of enemies when he is reported to have been instrumental in having a tenant of his Trenton apartment named to a position at Washington Crossing.

Early in the campaign Dr. Flood gave John F. Smoyer, of Bristol, his endorsement, and undivided backing, for the position of superintendent of state highways in Bucks County. The position carries with it a salary of $3,000. The siding of Flood with Smoyer added considerable fuel to the then-flaming fire among the Democrats, and this burst forth into a real conflagration, each faction taking sides. Dr. Flood lost out when William A. Frombach, of Revere, received the appointment a few days ago to the position for which Smoyer was being backed by Flood. It was stated at the time that Dr. Flood had previously said that if Smoyer was not appointed that he would tender his resignation as chairman of the Democratic committee in the county.

Dr. Flood also ran afoul of members of the party in Bucks County when he called a special meeting of the county committee which was held in New Hope on July 2nd. At this meeting Dr. Flood attempted to jump through a new set of by-laws which were passed at his instigation by what his opponents charge was a "packed" meeting.

Later this action was ruled illegal, due to the fact that the business to be transacted was not stated upon the call for the session. Another meeting of the county committee was held Monday evening at Chalfont, at which time Dr. Flood received his major reverse at the hands of the Democratic committee in Bucks County, when his by-laws adopted at the special meeting held at New Hope, were thrown into the political scrap-basket, and the old by-laws were amended so that a stated number of members of the Democratic County Committee can call a special meeting instead of the Democratic County chairman. This action was in direct opposition to what the Flood followers fought for at the session, and the anti-Flood contingent won out on the by-law fight by a majority of 12 votes, the vote being 82½ to 70½.

Crop Outlook Good

Harrisburg, July 11—Despite late planting due to cold weather, Pennsylvania crops were "making up for lost time" during June with the outlook good for an average crop, according to the monthly crop report today. The report said wheat crops were in good condition with an average of slightly better than expected. Corn and oats were reported growing slowly but in good condition. Despite some rotting of potato seed, the report said the crop was expected to be good. Tobacco planting was still in progress during June, with crops as a whole appearing promising. A better than average fruit crop was expected.

Truck Driver Killed

Pennsboro, N. J., July 11—Harry Finney, 28, Pedricktown, was killed instantly today when his truck was struck by a Camden-bound Phila. I. Reading seashore train at 7:30 a. m. on a crossing on the Crown Point road near here. Finney's body, legs almost amputated, was crushed between the truck and the train. Investigators said he either attempted to leap before the crash or was jolted from the cab. He was pronounced dead at Underwood Hospital, Woodbury, N. J.

May Scrap Several Bills

Washington, D. C., July 11—Scraping of a dozen bills, some of which were endorsed by the administration, appeared likely today as congressional leaders strove to carry out President Roosevelt's mandate for early adjournment. While Mr. Roosevelt is insisting upon enactment of his "must" program, the list has been narrowed to a point where, leaders say, it can be disposed of before the President's tax bill finally is enacted. The bills for which the administration will make a fight for passage before adjournment include the President's tax bill and the Guffey coal control bill.

Try to Quiet Mussolini's Guns

London, England, July 11—Britain's aggressive Foreign Minister, Sir Samuel Hoare, today led his country toward one more heroic effort to keep Mussolini's guns silent in Abyssinia. Sir Samuel, it is understood, will reiterate Britain's determination to find a peaceful way out by co-operating with other European powers to the League of Nations, in the House of Commons today. CUBANS HALTED IN FIGHT FOR FIRST PLACE

The Cubans' march to the first half championship of the Bristol Twilight League came to a halt last night on Leedom's field as Marty Fallon's Hibernians in conquering the colored boys, 6-3, in an interesting ball game.

The Hibs won despite the wildness of their ace twirler, Dave Ennis. Ennis had a habit of issuing passes during the fray. Five batters reached first via the passing route and another got there when he was hit with a pitched ball. The wildness kept Ennis reeling on his curve ball to pull him out of danger. Twice the Cubans had the bases but could not touch the southpaw of the Hibs in the pinch. A fast double-play ended the contest when it appeared as if the Cubans would set forth a rally to win the match.

The feature play of the evening came in the third inning. With the sacks bare, Ad Roe caught hold of a Bragg pitch and sent it on a line to left not far from the foul line. Spencer was playing his regular position and left with the crack of the bat. As the ball was about to touch the ground, Spencer made a dive for it and caught it before making a complete somersault. It was a marvelous catch and drew rounds of applause from the spectators and players. The ball was labeled for at least a triple.

"Johnny" Bragg took the defeat for the Cubans, although he held the winners to five safe hits. The game was actually thrown away by the colored team's infield. As the matter stood, Bragg himself and C. Derry committed five errors which aided the Hibernians in the scoring. Bragg was also wild, permitting five passes.

In the first frame when the Hibernians took a 3-0 lead, Derry was charged with two mis-plays and Bragg had one besides a wild pitch. In the next canto, two more Hibs tallies went across with the aid of a pass and an error by Derry. Errors also helped the colored club to amass several runs but lack of ability to solve Ennis in the pinches caused their defeat.

Tullytown still has an opportunity of finishing first in the Twilight loop. This club will play St. Ann's at Tullytown tomorrow night while the Cubans are playing the Caseys on Leedom's field and anything may happen in the games.

PICK DREAM GAME NINES TO PLAY HERE

By T. M. Juno
Preparations are now being made for the annual Bristol "Dream Game" to be played between the stars of the Lower Bucks County League and the best players of the Bristol Twilight League. The date has not been set as yet but letters have been mailed to the managers of the clubs requesting their pick of the best players.

Manager John Mulholland, Bristol A. A., has been the first to select his team. Here it is: Catchers, Afflerbach and Dougherty; infielders, Chomas, Heftman, Malmesbury, Harrison and Hill; outfielders, L. Hibbs, Barrett, Hines and Bilger.

Quickly on the heels of Mulholland's team came the response from Bob Sutton, of the Odd Fellows. Bob picks his catchers as Purcell and Afflerbach; pitchers, Munster, Black, and Hal Snyder; infielders, Joe Roe, Harrison, Bruce, Kuehnl and Heftman; outfielders, Barrett, Davis, Wright and L. Hibbs.

Managers of the Bristol Twilight League are determined to wipe off the defeats handed to their All-Star team twice by the pick of the Lower Bucks County League, and are getting together shortly to select the strongest team possible.

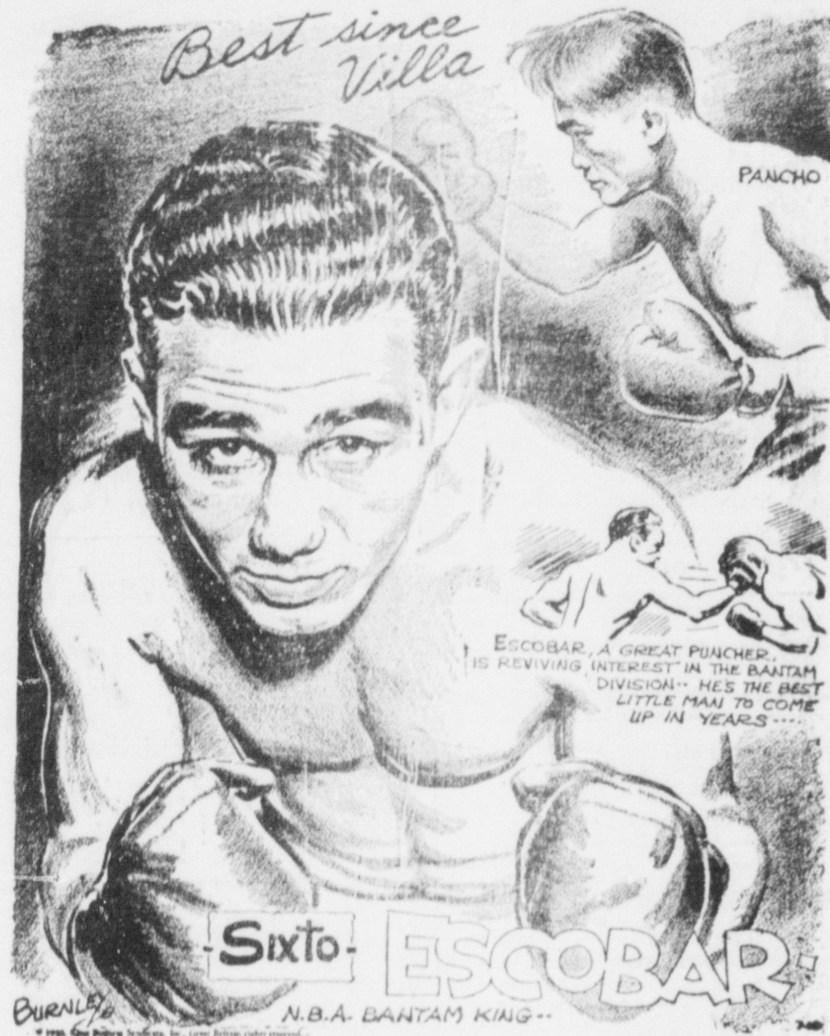

That Twilight League team of Marty Fallon looks very good on paper. Fancy having H. Clay, Ennis, "Bill" Thompson, Dougherty, Roe, Foster, McGinley, Brescia and DiTanna in a line-up.

"Kenny" Hill, second-sacker for Dolington in the Delaware River League and for Edgely in the Lower Bucks County League, is receiving a try-out with the Athletics in the American League. Hill batted .419 in the first half of the Delri League.

The two Bristol clubs, the A. A. and Hibernians, were forced to withdraw

The Puncher from Porto Rico

By BURNLEY

A tawny-skinned little Porto Rican, who looks like the best bantamweight since the golden era of Lynch and Herman, is once again reviving interest in the little fellows.

Sporting the sonorous handle of Sixto Escobar, this 118-pound whirlwind looks to be as outstanding among the bantams as Joe Louis is among the big boys.

Escobar, a smashing puncher with either mitt, has been tipping over his opponents with regularity of late. He gained general recognition as bantamweight champion of the world when he stiffened the highly-touted Baby Casanova in 9 heats up in Toronto.

In the Porto Rican's New York debut, he scored a sensational kayo over a right smart boxer, Joey Archibald, of Providence, who had previously made quite a hit on the Canzoneri-Ambers card at Madison Square Garden.

Escobar is an exceptionally clever boxer, a devastating puncher, is game and he can take it. Socking Sixto got up off the canvas the night he put the snore on Archibald, and that's always the test of a really great battler.

Out on the Coast, a New York bantamweight, Lou Salica, is recognized as the leading 118-pounder as a result of his victory over Pablo Dano, Filipino threat, but thus far Salica has shown little inclination to fight Escobar, who figures to have too much on the ball for the little Italian.

They should call the Porto Rican wallopier Silent Sixto, for he rarely utters a syllable, being just about the least talkative fighter around. However, his fists do the talking for him—or shouting, rather.

Not since another brown-skinned warrior named Pancho Villa blazed a sensational trail through the fly-weight and bantam divisions has a little man come up with the fistful potentialities of scintillating Sixto Escobar.

from the Delaware circuit because of lack of players who have interest enough to appear at Sunday games and also failure of the spectators to support the teams financially.

The brother battery of the Dolington Cornhuskers will be hard to beat. With "Gib" Gagliardi whipping his fast ball across and "Mike" doing the receiving, the teams will know that they are up against something.

Hulmeville A. A. deserves plenty of credit for winning the first half championship of both the Lower Bucks County loop and the Delaware River League. The Blackmen had to overcome many obstacles to win the championship, at times barely having enough players to start a game. The final three victories for the Hulmevillites were made with just nine signed players. Any injury to anyone would have proved fatal to the club.

After starting like a world-beater, he Edgely Braves were failures in the loop. Winning their first six starts, the Braves looked in for the first half but finished third when they dropped six of their final seven contests.

"Eddie" Sullivan of the Hibs in the Lower Bucks County loop, is clouting homers galore. His three home runs in four games has set a mark for local players to shoot at. The four-bagger clouted on Leedom's field against Bristol A. A. was the longest drive made on that diamond for quite some time.

The Junior Boys League is drawing quite a bit of interest. Parents of the boys attend the games whenever possible and are amazed at the spirit in which the youngsters put into the fray. It looks as if the Third Ward team is in for the first half.

Dave Landreth's club is doing great, winning six and losing three against competition that exceeds the caliber of teams of this vicinity. Dave has arranged games with Bordentown, Riverton, Pitman, Mays Landing, Cape May, Spring Lake, Avalon, and Barnegat Bay. The Seedsman will play the Manning Mills club in Bristol in several weeks. Manning Mills was the first club to beat the Landrethmen.

"Timmy" Harrison, of the Hibernians and Edgely Braves, is the most improved player in this district, both with the stick and in the field.

Despite the fact that it is losing almost continually, the Newportville A. A. club should not feel discouraged because they are playing fine ball and are losing by the narrowest of margins.

The new entries in the Bristol Twilight League have taken the first four positions. The new clubs are: Cubans, Tullytown, Caseys, and Newport Road Men's Club.

As this was being typed, Neil McDevitt, of the Hibernians, sent in his All-Star line-up as follows: Catchers, Dougherty and Hemp; pitchers, Black, Roy Devlin and Jack Devlin; infielders, Sullivan, Pandetta, J. Roe, Harrison and Malmesbury; outfielders, Bilger, Barrett, Hines and Wright. A little notation says that McDevitt thinks Malmesbury is the best player in the league.

HIBERNIANS TO ATTEMPT TO KEEP WINNING STREAK

The Hibernians will attempt to keep up their winning streak tonight at Newportville as the McDevittmen battle the Newporters in a Lower Bucks County League tilt. Edgely will play the Bristol A. A. team on Leedom's field while the first half champs, Hulmeville A. A., will battle the Odd Fellows on the Edgely diamond.

The "Hibs" are leading the pack at the present with four consecutive wins without a defeat. Fred Hibbs' Edgelyites are close behind with one defeat in four games. A victory for the A. A. over the Braves will put the Mulhollanders in a deadlock for second place. The Oddies will attempt to add another loss to the column of the Blackmen in their fray on the Edgely diamond.

The Hibs always have encountered plenty of difficulty in the Newportville club. In their last meeting here, "Johnny" Langon issued goose-eggs to the Bristolians until the sixth when the Hibs deadlocked the count. Sullivan won the game in the eighth with a home run. Langon will go to the hill against the league-leaders again tonight. Manager McDevitt plans to send either "Eddie" Sullivan, the home-run king, or "Zigzag" Lyzack against the Newporters.

"Spike" Tryon will be the hurler, Bristol A. A. will depend on to keep their average on the right side of the ledger, "Jake" Prall or "Mel" Wright will twirl for the Braves, "Jackie" Devlin and "Bill" Munster will be the pitchers in the contest on the Edgely diamond.

Last night in a Lower Bucks County League fray, Newportville bowed to the Hulmeville club by the score of 10-6.

Games are scheduled to begin at 6:30 o'clock.

LOWER BUCKS COUNTY LEAGUE

Schedule for Tonight—HIBERNIANS at NEWPORTVILLE EDGELY at BRISTOL A. A. HULMEVILLE at ODD FELLOWS

Seven Years Ago Today—

Gene Lawler entered the Bristol Twilight League hall of fame by twirling a no-run, no-hit, game on St. Ann's field. The Hibernians were victorious over the Caseys, 6-0. Although he had the Knights completely baffled with his tantalizing hooks, Lawler was entirely too wild. He issued five passes and hit a batsman to place himself in danger continually throughout the contest. "Eddie" Margerum with two rousing doubles led the hitters of the Hibs. "Jimmy" Lake proved the man of the hour, however, for in the first he doubled with the sacks loaded to score three runs.
